About the Speakers

Rukia Sebit is the Executive Director of Sunflower Trust, a literacy and leadership development program that provides holistic educational support to vulnerable children through literacy, technology and arts. She was a beneficiary of Nairobits Trust, a technology training program for underprivileged youth, which gave her the skills she needed to successfully run Nairobits for 10 years. She also instigated the founding of Zanzibits, a Zanzibar based technology program, as well as Kampabits, in Kampala. She is passionate about using technology as a force for social change, literacy and the education of young women and girls.

Henry Maina is the Regional Director, ARTICLE 19 Eastern Africa where he runs programmes that promote and defend freedom of expression, media freedom and access to information in Eastern Africa countries. He is one of the lead experts on access to information in Africa and worked on African Declaration on Internet Rights and Freedoms. He is a critical actor in engaging states and ICT companies on interventions that allow for respect of freedom online. He has expertise in media law, digital rights, access to information and governance.

Andrew Oduory is the Head of IT and Operations, Wananchi Group. His work entails strategy drafting and implementation, budget formulation and management, infrastructure design and support. Other tasks are system implementation and support, vendors/partners management, and Team leadership and Management.

Tim Oriedo is an Executive Coach, Big Data and Digital Transformation Instructor at Strathmore Business School. He has over 15 years experience in the Telecommunication, Media and Technology industry. Further, he is a technology enthusiast driving the mobile first digital posture in the traditional media and telecommunication industry.

Wanjiku Itambo is a recruiter in the tech space. She is a co-founder and director at Talent Masters with her core skills being on People, Operations and Training. She has 6 years of experience in HR and 8 in Management and Administration.

Christopher Kemei is the Director for Licencing, Compliance and Standards, the Communicators Authority

Dr. Wambui Wamunyu, a KICTANet member, is the head of Media and Films studies at Daystar University's School of Communication. Her academic interests are in digital technologies, media and research.

Liz Orembo is a KICTAnet associate with background in Communications and Public Policy. She is an ICT4D enthusiast with interests in ICT policies, Internet freedoms and governance.
